

Young George Gershwin has reached his destination: Paris! The lively city immediately fills him with wonder and fascination. A street café, to stroll around Montmartre and along the Seine, the company of a lovely young lady; this is the life! However, at Pont Neuf a small dog causes a commotion and George must continue on his own. Now he finally wants to see the most famous sight of all: The Eiffel Tower. After an exhausting climb the young composer is rewarded with a magnificent view over Paris, which is truly unbelievable! George could not keep these memories to himself, you can find them in his music: An American in Paris is a homage to the French capital in the 20s.
